Why Coaching?

What Coaches excel at doing

Building Trust

Personal transformation first requires a sense of comfort, safety, and rapport. The first step is not just listening, but hearing the clients' true needs.

Planning for Success

Coaches help people set smart goals and discover paths to achieve them. They provide structure for decision making so people can focus on pursuing their vision.

Giving Feedback

To stay on track, people need encouragement, honest critique, and to be held accountable. Coaches help to support and guide people throughout struggles and victories.

As a coach, you can help people make improvements to their lives

Well Being

Coaches help people to make better decisions about their health and lifestyle, and seize what they really want out of life.

Goal Attainment

Coaches help people create goals that are focused and attainable, and keep clients accountable to the steps they need to .

Productivity

By revealing the root of business problems, coaches unlock the potential for real growth.

Confidence

With tools acquired from coaches, individuals face the future empowered to do what's necessary to make their dreams come true.

Purpose of Coaching

Coaching is not merely a technique to be wheeled out and rigidly applied in certain prescribed situations. It is a way of leading, a way of treating people, a way of thinking, a way of being. The underlying and ever-present purpose of coaching is building the self-belief of others. If leaders and managers bear this in mind and act on it persistently and authentically, they will be staggered by the improvements in relationships and in a performance that result.

Whether we coach, manage or lead, the effectiveness of what we do depends in large measure on our beliefs about human potential. The expressions "to get the best out of someone" and "your hidden potential" implies that more lies within the person waiting to be released. Unless the leader or coach believes that people possess more capability than they are currently expressing, he or she will not be able to help them. They must think of people in terms of their potential, not their performance. The majority of appraisal systems are seriously flawed for this reason. People are put in performance boxes from which it is hard for them to escape, either in their own eyes or their manager's.

The Purpose of Coaching

Building Self-Belief

We build self-belief when we make decisions, take successful actions and recognize our full responsibility for both our successes and failures. For people to build self-belief, they need to know that their success is due to their own efforts. They must also know that other people believe in them, which means being trusted, allowed, encouraged and supported to make their own choices and decisions. To use coaching successfully, the organization has to adopt a far more optimistic view than usual of the dormant capability of all people.

Unlocking People's Potential

Our beliefs about the capability of others have a direct impact on their performance. The purpose of coaching is to unlock people's potential to maximize their own performance. It is helping them to learn rather than teaching or telling them. Potential is the engine of coaching and of performance. When leaders focus on potential and observe the coaching fundamentals of curiosity, non-judgment, and partnering, they no longer measure people by their past performance or blame them for mistakes. Fear and other inner interferences decrease, and self-belief, awareness and responsibility increase. By adopting a coaching frame of mind, leaders can release rich reserves of talent and motivation and a strong sense of purpose in their people.

Coaching Conversations

The conversation is the relationship!

Not all conversations are coaching conversations. First, a coach-like conversation is very intentional and often includes pre-thought. Second, a coaching conversation focuses on the other person, his strengths and challenges, and the attributes he brings to the conversation. Third, the purpose of coaching conversations is to stimulate thinking, growth, and change that lead to action. Good coaching conversation also builds strong employee engagement.

Coaching conversations can improve the organization's ability to set goals and achieve satisfying results by enabling employees to identify and take advantage of their natural strengths. When an individual is able to listen carefully, respond thoughtfully, and resist imposing own solution, he/she have the basis of a coaching conversation which opens the door to new thinking, new action, and valuable learning. Good coaching also builds strong employee engagement. The coaching conversations also calls for a greater focus on building the 'capacity' of leaders to address emerging business challenges through individual transformation and change. This often requires large-scale strategic organizational change and a great deal of behavior change at an individual level.

Coaching conversations can improve the organization's ability to set goals and achieve satisfying results by enabling employees to identify and take advantage of their natural strengths

Put simply, a coaching conversation is developing the 'ask, not tell' habit which encourages people to work things out for themselves and take more responsibility for their actions.

Coaching is a reciprocal engagement between two parties. When one wins, the achievement can cascade from the employee to the bottom line.

LISTEN CAREFULLY

Don't assume what the conversation is about or what path it should take.

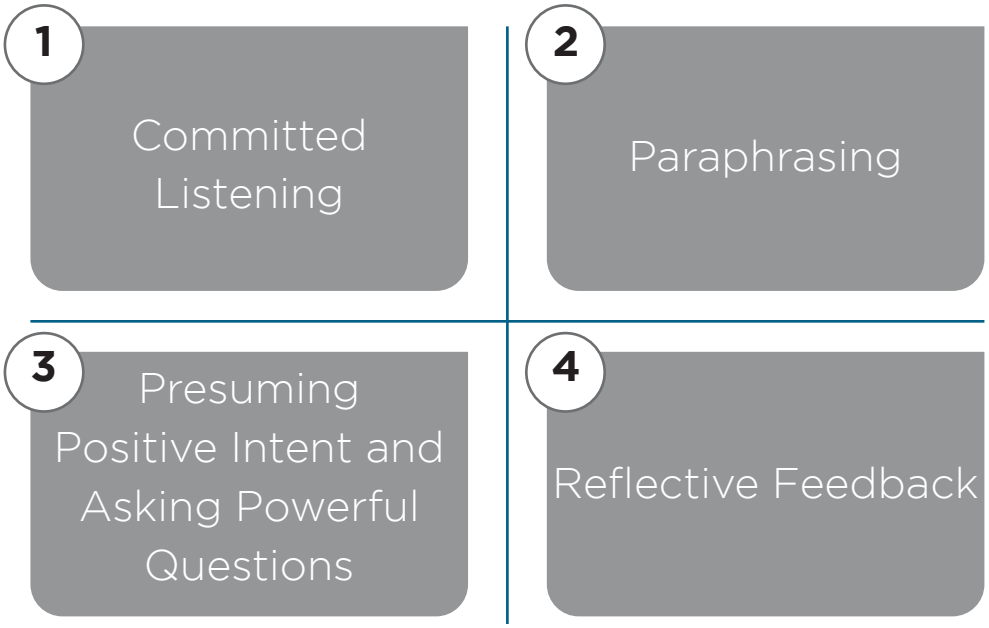

RESPOND THOUGHTFULLY

Coaching is about uncovering answer's through inquiry openness and exploration

RESIST IMPOSING YOUR OWN SOLUTION

Shift from the norm of telling problem-solving and giving advice. Coaching conversations are about the other person's learning.

Key Skills for Holding Coaching Conversations

Committed Listeing

When you are a committed listener, you pay close attention to both the verbal and nonverbal cues of the person speaking

- Focus on the other person.
- Invite reflection and dialogue.
- Be nonjudgmental.
- Include times of silence.
- Avoid advice giving.

Paraphrasing

Paraphrasing helps the speaker clarify his thinking and aligns the thinking of both the speaker and the listener. Paraphrase what the other person says.

Presuming Positive Intent and Asking Powerful Questions

Presuming positive intent means that we enter into a conversation with a positive mindset about the other person and our language conveys this positivity to the individual.

Communicate using Reflective feedback

The objective in reflective feedback is to give honest and direct comments while at the same time preserving relationships.

- Clarify for understanding.
- Express the value or value potential of an idea or behavior.
- Pose reflective questions or possibilities.

JOURNEY

Foundations For The Journey

Successful Organizations Need Manager as coach At All Levels.

Organisations today need leaders who are Coaches, not controllers. In today's VUCA (Volatile, Uncertain, Complex and Ambiguous) world, we seem to be shifting from an approach based around problem solving and planning aimed at reducing uncertainty, to a world where progress is made by actively engaging with uncertainty, requiring higher levels of leadership agility. The role of the leader is to Coach people to bring a shift the existing mindset thereby creating a culture of empowerment and solution focused.

Manager as coach involves a phased approach to develop leaders the necessary expertise of an effective coach. An important aspect is development of the Core Competencies as defined by ICF, look at the possibilities, overcome barriers, and hold the space to have engaged conversations.

Inspire Coaching Systems along with Erickson Coaching International provides a systematic and phased approach to develop coaches in alignment with strategy of your organization.

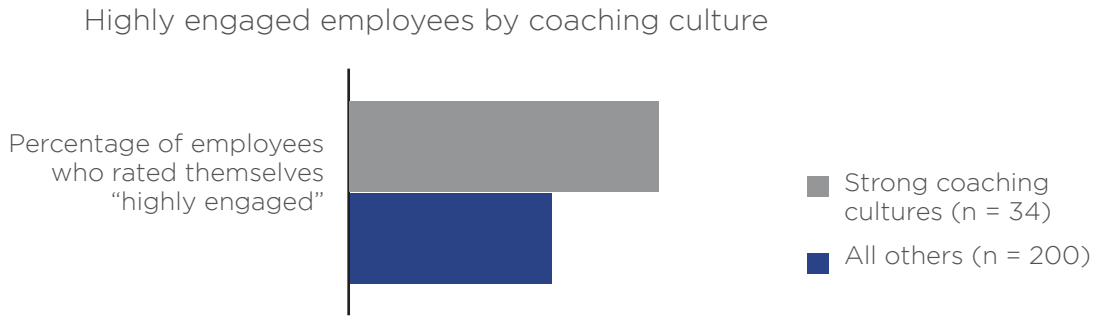

In today's complex and evolving economy, leadership has never been so important. One of the biggest challenges to strategies deployment is a fixed mind set that creation of strategy should occur at the top and then be executed at the levels below.

This stems from an outdated believe that leadership means control and prescription which is a common root cause of poor performance in an organisation. Developing a Coaching Culture is key to an organization's ability to execute and remain focused.

Coaching Culture Outcomes

A strong coaching culture is correlated with higher employee engagement and stronger financial performance. Similar gaps were noted during the 2014 study.

Coaching Outcomes and Satisfaction

Although the most commonly cited reason for pursuing coaching was to optimize individual/team work performance, the most commonly citied outcome was improved communication skills (42%) followed by increased self-esteem/self confidence (40%) and increased productivity (39%).

When considering the coaching they received, 88% of consumers reported that they were somewhat or very satisfied with the coaching experience.

> Employee engagement is the emotional commitment an employee has to the organization and its goals, resulting in the use of discretionary effort.

TESTIMONIALS

"I worked closely with my Coach here in the United States. He is a man of integrity, intellect and work ethic. His patience and stability during the most challenging of times always presented itself when needed most. Many miles separate us now but when I need guidance and logic I reach out to him for counsel. A man of high quality and skill."
– Financial Services Consultant @ a largest BFSI Organization

"I consider my Coach as my friend, philosopher and guide. The first session with him in Human Process Lab was an excellent experience for me that set me out on self transformation. I was amazed at his incisive and accurate analysis of people. His willingness to partner with his participants in their transformation journey, his humility and an excellent sense of humor makes every interaction a great joy. I am quite lucky to be counted among his friends, for I draw a lot of inspiration from him."
– CEO @ a Leading Software Services Company

"My Coach is an entrepreneur extraordinaire! In the fast growing professional coaching community in India, he stands out as a mover and shaker, who wants great things for coaching and is determined to help make them happen. He is globally involved in coaching initiatives, supporting ICF headquarters in the US as well as serving as the leader of the Hyderabad Chapter of ICF. Under his aegis, the chapter sponsored a conference quite recently which entailed having a big vision and being a great implementer, both of which describe him to a tee. We thank him for his efforts in the global theatre on behalf of the coaching profession."
– Chief Coaching Officer @ a Leading Consulting Organization

"My Coach has the ability to quickly empower his Coachee, taking them to the heart of what could be holding them back and creating a solution-focussed environment. While he is insightful, sensitive and smart, he is able to truly create magic through his ability to ask powerful questions that eventually lead to more clarity & speed of execution. The fact that he encourages you not to be afraid to fail... just keep failing better... is extremely empowering. Always grateful for this association. Power on "Mr Coach"!"
– Lead - Diversity & Inclusion, South Asia @ a Leading Consumer Goods Company

Gaurav Arora is an insightful, inspirational, interactive and ingenuous person. As a practicing coach, he is sensitive, listening deeply, and completely accepting and totally non-judgemental with the client coachee. Dialogues with him always leave the other person feeling positive and optimistic about life. Gaurav touches people with his magic and transformation happens. He is a force-multiplier and impacts lives for the better.
– Managing Director @ a Leading Consulting Company

Gaurav is a simple person so he makes some very intense points in the most simplistic manner and that for me is what defines Him. I have interacted with him as a client, as a friend, as HR head over many years now and also started my coaching journey under his guidance. I can never forget "don't do coaching, be the coach". Wonderful human being who is absolutely positive, always helpful and passionate coach. All the best Gaurav and as you say "keep inspiring"
– Regional Consulting Center Head - HR India @ a Leading Telecommunications Company

Gaurav Arora (GRV) is one of the most motivated and focused people I have ever met. His goals are lofty, by most standards, and his passion and commitment match. He surrounds himself with success, being vulnerable and open to receive feedback, explore unknown territories, go outside of his comfort zone and keep moving in the direction of his dreams. If you want a coach or a leader, seek GRV to support your momentum.
– Master Certified Coach and Global Director @ a Leading Educational Institute

"My coach is a great example of how one can 'design' a career for him/herself while remaining within the organization. He was Head of Pre-Sales but wanted to create a new career for himself in the area of coaching. He 'sold' his idea to our CEO about creating a coaching platform for our senior leadership. He worked with the leadership members, internal coaches, external coaches and worked out a business case about providing one executive coach for each senior manager. It was an amazing exercise that he managed single handedly. Kudos to him. This also is an example of how the community at large benefits when one person creates a career he loves."
– VP - Human Resources @ a Leading Technology organization

"My Coach is a synonymous to Coaching. He is not only a thorough gentleman, but also a great professional. He has been big support in building Coaching as capability among Biocon's managers. We have been partnering since last 2 years in this long journey of creating. We wish him bigger success in future."
– Group President - Sales & Marketing @ a Leading Financial Trust

"I was coached by my Coach in getting ICF accredited training as a Coach. I found him as a hands-on people centric coach who immediately commands trust and creates a personal zone of comfort with those that he guides and coaches. "
– Director, Sales Operations @ a Leading Information Technology Organization

"My Coach has this amazing connect with everyone and comes with a deep experience and understanding of Coaching . He brings tremendous Inspiration and confidence in his coachees and provides such clarity to them through his coaching techniques that we remain mesmerized by our own potential. Truly an authentic human being who has left an ever lasting impression on my life."
– EVP & Business Head @ a Leading Executive Search Firm

"My Coach is a great Trainer with in-depth knowledge of the subject that he deals with. What makes him impactful is his personal touch to each participant in the program. He makes the content relevant and useful to each participant so that each person goes home with some very good learning. Most of all he is a great human being - understand human dynamics and human mind very well - that's what makes him a great Trainer."
– GM - Training @ a Leading Food, Snack and Beverage Corporation

I worked under the guidance of Gaurav during my coaching sessions. I was very satisfied with his way of coaching. He is an excellent coach and was capable to get insights to drive sessions for my specific goals. I admire him as a person as well for his openness and readiness to help in any situation.
– Chief Operations Officer @ a Leading Non-Bank Financial Institution

Gaurav has amazing skills as a trainer and as a coach. He has never failed to surprise me with delivering solutions to very complex issues, in the most unassuming manner. He is a very down to earth person who has immense abilities to make you feel at ease within minutes. Highly professional and ethical in his approach to business, Gaurav will go a long way in the sphere of coaching. what moves me the most about Gaurav, is his caring personality to the human race. He respects people and has never failed to show immense gratitude for the ones who have supported him. I see a perfect mix of a good human and an extremely good professional in Gaurav, who will go a long way in making a very successful and able coach. He does full justice to his calling as a coach and I wish him the very best in his journey to helping many more individual's not only to address their issues but also in creating good future coaches like himself.
– Chief Operations Officer @ a Leading Law Firm

"My Coach delivered a number of the group coaching workshops for our management team in India and Africa. We found her a very knowledgeable, dedicated and caring professional who will be always ready to go the extra mile needed for any individual or company."
– Owner @ a Leading Diamond Manufacturer
