CASE STUDY

Fostering a Coaching Culture for Organisational Success

Client Overview:

Our client is a leading general insurance company based in Mumbai, India. They offer a wide range of insurance products such as motor, health, travel, home, and commercial insurance to individuals and businesses. With over 122 branches in India and a presence in nine countries internationally, they are known for their customer-centric approach and innovative products tailored to meet customer needs.

The Challenge:

In today's dynamic business landscape, organisations face constant challenges and opportunities. Effective leadership is key to navigating these challenges. However, modern leadership requires a shift from traditional autocratic approaches to collaborative ones. Integrating coaching into leadership fosters flexibility, improves employee performance, and enhances overall team satisfaction and engagement. Recognising the importance of coaching in leadership development, our client sought to cultivate a coaching culture among their leaders across various segments. They aimed to empower leaders to work collaboratively, solve problems efficiently, and seize opportunities effectively.

'We are committed to confidentiality and are, therefore, unable to disclose the identities of our clients.'

Our Approach:

To address our client's needs, we implemented our in-house program, "The Art and Science of Coaching" Essentials Course by Erickson Coaching International, for 28 top leaders. This comprehensive program, designed for ongoing intervention, enables leaders to become ICF Certified ACC Coaches. Through rigorous 60 hours of coach training, 10 hours of mentoring for application of concepts learnt during the training, and oral assessments, leaders undergo a mindset shift from command and control to an accountability-based coaching culture.

The program focuses on enhancing team communications, conflict resolution skills, and risk management while involving stakeholders effectively. It equips leaders with coaching tools like powerful questioning, maintaining presence and listening actively to navigate change, foster innovation, and unlock their team's potential, leading to strategic thinking and holistic leadership development.

Contribution:

Our methodical approach led to a significant transformation within the organisation. Equipped with coaching tools, leaders evolved into strategic thinkers adept at navigating change and fostering innovation. They realised the importance of teamwork and their role in unlocking their team's potential, resulting in a shift in mindset and the growth of a coaching culture within the organisation.

According to an ICF Global Consumer Awareness Study, a growing organisational coaching culture leads to improved communication skills, increased self-esteem, and productivity. This, in turn, enhances both team and individual performance, contributing to a better work-life balance and overall organisational success.
